

Unifi named 'Fibre Producer of the Year'

By Beth Wright | 7 February 2017

Font size   Email  Print

US yarn manufacturer Unifi has been named 'Fibre Producer of the Year' at the World Textile Awards, which strives to provide a global platform for textile companies to share their successes.

Unifi is a leader in producing high-quality recycled fibre and other Premium Value-Added (PVA) technologies, providing innovative, global textile solutions and unique branded yarns for customers at every level of the supply chain. Through its research and product development team, Unifi works with customers to develop products that meet the demands of their consumers.

"We're proud to be recognised as a leader in the textile industry," says Unifi president Tom Caudle. "Through our dedication to developing innovative products that combine environmental responsibility, style and performance, we continue to accommodate the trends of our ever-changing field."

Last month, the company booked what it said was a strong second-quarter boosted by the performance of its Brazil and Asia operations, which offset weaker conditions in its domestic market.